BiggerPockets Launches Full-Featured Blogging Platform for Real Estate Aficionados

DENVER, Colorado, Oct 2, 2008 -- The premier real estate social networking site, BiggerPockets.com <<http://www.biggerpockets.com>> has just launched BiggerPockets Blogs <<http://www.biggerpockets.com/blogs>>, an exclusive, full-featured blogging platform that allows users to set up their very own real-estate related blogs, aided by the creative resources of BiggerPockets.com.

"Setting up a blog takes less than a minute," BiggerPockets.com founder, Joshua Dorkin says. "You can customize your layout, it is search engine optimized, and it gives you the opportunity, among other things, to actually make money by adding advertising."

Another excellent reason to set up a blog on BiggerPockets, says Dorkin, is the instant publicity. Bloggers will have their blogs promoted across BiggerPockets and the web in general.

As proof of its vibrancy, BiggerPockets is about to break the 100 thousand forum post mark, highlighting the phenomenal growth BiggerPockets.com is enjoying among real estate professionals, investors, and consumers.

"This is further proof," says Dorkin, "that in a time of upheaval and great volatility throughout the real estate market in the U.S., people are turning in greater numbers to BiggerPockets.com to exchange ideas, information and expertise."

About BiggerPockets.com - BiggerPockets.com is based in Denver and has been profiled by some of the most trusted names in U.S. media.
